

Safety with style and comfort?

Yes is the answer says John Williamson of Welborne Corporate Image.

“We consider that the advances in fabric technology have improved workwear wearability for staff. Many new fabrics actively keep you cooler in hot weather by taking moisture away from the skin. Others have finishes that increase their UV rating to 50+ even for light colour lightweight fabric or help repel liquid spills. “

“Modern workwear designs are user-friendly. They have features such as extra mesh panels to increase the ventilation in active jobs, roomier garments for comfort, knee pads for protection, anti-static and HiVis garments for riskier areas . The choice in styles, fabrics and colours means that there is something to suit every occupation and requirement. Your staff can have comfortable safety uniforms that also look good and are still reasonably priced. “

John said that at the Queensland Safety Show, Welborne will show a selection from their standard designs of workwear including HiVis items plus shirts, trousers and polos. Welborne can also design and manufacture custom made items to suit your needs whether you have outdoor, office or corporate staff.
